

“Connecting the Gospel to Life: Learning from Hebrews”¹

Series: “The Gospel Disconnect”²

Main Idea: How does Hebrews help us address the gospel disconnect, particularly for those who are discouraged? Hebrews helps us fulfill two vital responsibilities.

- I. Hebrews helps us think about the supremacy of Jesus.
 - A. We see it in His titles.
 - B. We see it in His comparisons.
 - C. We see it in His accomplishments.
- II. Hebrews helps us live in light of the supremacy of Jesus.
 - A. We’re called to encourage one another (3:13; 10:25).
 1. We’re to do it daily.
 2. We’re to do it to protect our brothers against becoming hardened.
 3. We’re to do it to promote church involvement.
 4. We’re to do it as we see the Day approaching.
 - B. We’re called to stir up one another (10:24).
 1. This requires being intentional.
 2. This requires getting involved.
 3. This requires not just doing, but motivating others to do.
 - C. We’re called to love each other as brothers (13:1).
 1. Since we have the same Father, we are brothers.
 2. In order to please our Father, we must show we value our brothers.

Make It Personal: Three important questions to consider...

1. What discouraged brother does the Lord want me to encourage this week?
2. What sidelined brother does the Lord want me to stir up this week?
3. What brother have I loved in the past that the Lord wants me to love again this week?

It’s important to remember. On this weekend we remember those who have given their lives for us so that we might enjoy the wonderful blessings the Lord has given us as a nation.

And of course, every week we gather to remember what our Savior did for us. During the weeks leading up to and following Resurrection Sunday, we did a series called “The Gospel Panorama,” and remembered what Christ did for us. He died for our sins, was buried, raised on the third day, according to the Scriptures, and the appeared multiple times before returning to heaven.

But the purpose of remembering isn’t to take us into the past and leave us there. Remembering should affect the way we live now. That’s true as we remember those who sacrificed their lives on battlefields. How much more so as we remember the ultimate sacrifice.

When that fails to happen, there’s a “disconnect,” as we’re calling it in our current series. That’s not good. So, what is the proper action that indicates we’re remembering as we ought? A cross around our necks? A Bible on our desk? If we truly believe that Christ died for our sins two thousand years ago, how do we show it now?

Thankfully, the Lord gives us a clear answer. Where? In twenty-one New Testament epistles. We don’t see the gospel per se in the epistles (the four gospels provide that for us). What the epistles do is to connect the gospel to life. If Jesus died and rose again (which He did), and if we believe He did this for us (which we profess), then here are the implications. Gospel realities produce gospel responsibilities.

Thus far, we’ve looked at the connections in 1 Peter, Romans, and Ephesians. Today it’s Hebrews. Interestingly, the word “gospel” does not appear in Hebrews. But gospel sightings are on every page. And so are gospel connections.

² For a previous look at this passage, see the message preached on 5/5/13 as part of our series, “A People to Live With in the Crucible of Suffering”.

There are 303 verses in Hebrews, and of those, there are gospel sightings in 43 verses, in nearly every chapter. So in 14% of the verses the author keeps reminding the readers of Jesus Christ, His death for their sins, and His victorious resurrection. But he's not giving them mere history. He's showing them how the historical accomplishments of Jesus are the key to faithful living in the present.

For our Scripture reading, let's go to the end of this letter, and see one of his powerful gospel connections. Then we'll work backwards and see the basis for it.

Scripture Reading: Hebrews 13:12-16

Weary. Discouraged. Hurting. Disillusioned. Fearful. Ready to quit.

Do those words describe anybody you know? Do you know anybody who is weary of life, who's discouraged, hurting, disillusioned with how things are going, fearful, and ready to throw in the towel?

For most of us, there are some people coming to mind right now. And perhaps some in this room would say, "Those words describe how I'm feeling right now."

Is there hope for the weary, the discouraged, the fearful? Yes indeed! But how is this hope experienced? How can we help the weary, the discouraged, the fearful?

This is precisely what the person who wrote Hebrews is seeking to do. He has some weary and discouraged people in mind, and I find it interesting how he seeks to help them. He wrote a letter. A very special kind of God-breathed letter.

Keep in mind that the book of Hebrews was originally a sermon. The writer calls it "a word of exhortation" in 13:22. You can read it aloud in about 50 minutes, and as you do you'll be confronted with the author's twofold agenda over and over.

While we might consider this preacher's message top shelf theologically, his aim is to encourage, not merely to inform. Again, he calls Hebrews a word of exhortation. This is always the goal of a good sermon, not simply to dispense a bunch of facts and information, but to help listeners think about something, and then live in light of that something.

This particular preacher (we don't know who it is, since he doesn't identify himself) has two aims in this sermon, two agendas meant to keep his brothers in the game, so to speak.

One, he wants to get them thinking about a particular subject. And two, he wants to get them functioning in light of that particular subject. Those are the areas where weary and discouraged people need help, in their thinking and functioning.

And what's the subject that needs to captivate their thinking and motivate their functioning? It's one and the same, namely, the supremacy of Jesus. Think rightly about Jesus. And function rightly in light of Jesus. That's what is needed. In that order. Then and now.

The seed of this discouragement went back to AD 49. That's when the Roman emperor, Claudius, expelled from Rome a group of Jewish Christians. This meant that the early church was less than 20 years old and already taking it on the chin.

It was about 15 years after this Roman edict (some time in the 60s), that the Spirit of God guided this preacher to write this epistle to the Hebrews, to encourage these disillusioned Jewish Christians. And they needed it, for they were considered traitors by their fellow Jews and social outcasts by the Gentiles because of their belief in Jesus. And all it would take to end the opposition was to just give up and go back to their old ways.

And that's what some of them were considering. Do Christians ever feel like throwing in the towel on their faith? Yes, at times. By scanning the book of Hebrews we see clues that these Christians did.

The writer exhorts them not to drift away (2:1), to hold on to courage (3:6), not to turn away (3:12), to hold firmly to faith (4:14, 16), to go on to maturity (6:1), not to fall away (6:6), to be diligent to the end (6:11), to remember earlier days when they stood their ground (10:32), to run the race with perseverance (12:1), to endure hardship (12:7), to strengthen feeble arms and weak knees (12:12), and to make every effort to live in peace and be holy (12:14).

This was their condition. So what was needed? If you want one verse that sums up what the readers needed to do, it's 10:36. Let's look at it.

"For you have need of endurance [NIV 'You need to persevere'], so that when you have done the will of God you may receive what is promised." Endurance. That's what is needed, says the writer. The capacity to hang in there, to keep going, to persevere. Do that, and then you'll receive the promise.

Robert Moffat, Scottish missionary to South Africa under the London Missionary Society and father-in-law to David Livingstone, said, "We will have all of eternity to enjoy our victories but only one short life in which to win them."

So how do we help people who are discouraged, perhaps ready to walk away from their profession of faith in Jesus Christ? According to the book of Hebrews, we need to help them in two areas, thinking and functioning, with one subject, the glorious gospel of the Supreme One, Jesus Christ.

I. Hebrews helps us think about the supremacy of Jesus.

We've done a verse by verse exposition of Hebrews before (51 messages), and this morning we're going to narrow our focus to Hebrews' "one another" commands in point two. But since right functioning grows out of right thinking, I want to call to our remembrance three ways in which Hebrews demonstrates the supremacy of Jesus.

A. We see it in His titles. We won't take time to look at each of these, but I do want to mention them. The writer identifies at least nine titles for Jesus in this letter.

1. He is the Son (1:2).
2. He is the Heir of all things (1:2).
3. He is the King (1:8).
4. He is the Lord (2:3).
5. He is the Author of salvation (2:10).
6. He is the High Priest (2:17; 4:14; 5:10).
7. He is the Apostle (3:1).
8. He is the Christ (3:14).
9. He is the Son of God (4:14).

Why is the writer telling us this? What's his reason for giving us Jesus' titles? It's because some of his readers are wavering in their faith. They're considering walking away from the One in whom they professed faith. So the writer is reminding them just who this One is. He is the Son, the Heir of all things, the King, the Lord, the Author of salvation, the High Priest, the Apostle, the Christ, and the Son of God. And if that's who He is, then it's unthinkable to turn back and leave Him.

By the way, it's also unthinkable to marginalize Him, to give Sunday lip-service to Him, to tack Him on to a self-absorbed life. He who is supreme deserves to be supreme in our lives.

But it's not just His titles that demonstrate Jesus' supremacy. Secondly...

B. We see it in His comparisons. Again, we won't take time to develop these comparisons, but I do want to highlight them. The writer demonstrates Jesus' supremacy by putting Him side by side with three very respected individuals, especially in the minds of his Jewish audience.

1. He's superior to angels (1:4ff.). "For to which of the angels did God ever say, "You are my Son; today I have become your Father"? Or again, "I will be his Father, and he will be my Son”?” Answer? No angel ever heard God say that to him. But Jesus did!

2. He’s superior to Moses (3:3). The writer says in 3:3, “Jesus has been found worthy of greater honor than Moses, just as the builder of a house has greater honor than the house itself.”

3. He’s superior to human priests (4:14-7:28).

“You don’t have a priest,” said hostile family members to these Jewish Christians who no longer came to the temple. “How do you expect God to hear you without a priest?”

But we do have a priest, says the writer of Hebrews in 4:14-16, “Therefore, since we have a great high priest who has gone through the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold firmly to the faith we profess. For we do not have a high priest who is unable to sympathize with our weaknesses, but we have one who has been tempted in every way, just as we are—yet was without sin. Let us then approach the throne of grace with confidence, so that we may receive mercy and find grace to help us in our time of need.”

This is the solution for the weary. Think rightly about Jesus. Think about His titles and comparisons. He’s the supreme one! And there’s more.

C. We see it in His accomplishments. Jesus has done things that no other person has ever done, whether in Judaism or any other religion. In chapters 8-10 the writer highlights three of Jesus’ accomplishments.

1. He established a better covenant (ch 8). A new covenant. Not a covenant of externals, but one that results in God writing His law upon the regenerated hearts of His people.

2. He entered a better sanctuary (ch 9). Not a man-made sanctuary in Jerusalem, but a sanctuary in heaven located in the very presence of God Himself. That’s where Jesus is now. And how did He get there?

3. He offered a better sacrifice (ch 10). Not the blood of goats and calves, but His own blood (12). That’s what Jesus sacrificed, His own blood. And that made it a far better sacrifice. It’s better because by it He took away sins (10:12), He made sinners holy (10:10, 14), and He opened the way for us to enter the presence of God (10:19-22).

And how does a person benefit from His better sacrifice? By doing good things? No. By putting one’s total faith in the supreme good thing He did for us.

Do you want your sins forgiven, my friend? They can be. How? By looking to Jesus, and putting your total trust in Him and in His better sacrifice.

Brothers and sisters, the first readers of this letter were considering turning back from Jesus and returning to Judaism. That’s not where we typically struggle. Most of us are not thinking of going back to Judaism, or any other religion, for that matter. We struggle with something far more subtle, but just as dangerous.

What’s that? It’s turning our backs on the true Jesus and settling for a domesticated Jesus.

It’s true. In the American church, we don’t typically abandon Jesus. We just sort of redefine Him and then reposition Him. And before long, He’s no longer the Supreme One for whom we exist, but rather, the Domesticated One who exists for us.

And so we give Him Sunday morning at 10:30, at least most Sundays. And a few dollars in the plate. And maybe add a little Christian service now and then if we can find the time. And if He doesn’t perform as expected, we get upset with Him, perhaps disillusioned, possibly bitter at Him. If asked, we still say we believe in Him. And we may pray to Him from time to time, if we need something. But for all practical purposes,

He's no longer the Savior we cherish and the Lord in whose will we delight. He's an appendage, an add-on, a footnote, a keep-sake.

But that's unthinkable, says the writer of this epistle. He is the Supreme One who is worthy of our all and all, and if we're not joyfully giving Him our all and all, it's an indication that we're not thinking rightly, that our thinking needs to change.

John Newton, the well known hymn-writer of Amazing Grace, used a little illustration to expose the folly of this sort of thinking. He says, "Suppose a man was going to New York to take possession of a large estate, and his [carriage] should break down a mile before he got to the city, which obliged him to walk the rest of the way; what a fool we should think him, if we saw him ringing his hands, and blubbering out all the remaining mile, "My [carriage] is broken! My [carriage] is broken!"³

We'd all say that fellow isn't thinking rightly, wouldn't we? "Come on, buddy. You're almost to the big prize! Look ahead and keep walking!"

Friends, if we've put our trust in Jesus, we are on our way to an amazing city, and when we get there, we are going to see Jesus and receive an eternal inheritance that He obtained for us. So here's the question. Shouldn't that truth affect the way we respond when our carriage breaks down along the way and we have to endure a temporary inconvenience to get to our destination? Indeed it should, and it will if we engage our minds and think about it rather than just thinking about the broken down carriage.

So how do we help a person who's grown weary in the walk? According to Hebrews, we start here, with their thinking. Get them thinking, not about the hardness of their current situation, but about the supremacy of the One who gave His life for us. Fill their gaze with the glorious gospel panorama.

One of the greatest sources of clear, beautiful, motivational gospel sightings is a good hymnbook. Here's one that's probably new to most of us, written by Jehoiada Brewer (1752-1817) back in the late 1700s.

*1 Hail, sovereign love, that first began
The scheme to rescue fallen man!
Hail, matchless, free, eternal grace,
That gave my soul a hiding-place!*

*2 [Against the God who rules the sky
I fought with hand uplifted high;
Despised the mention of his grace,
Too proud to seek a hiding-place.*

*3 But thus the eternal counsel ran:
"Almighty love, arrest that man!"
I felt the arrows of distress,
And found I had no hiding-place.*

*4 Indignant Justice stood in view;
To Sinai's fiery mount I flew;
But Justice cried, with frowning face,
"This mountain is no hiding-place!"*

*5 Ere long a heavenly voice I heard,
And Mercy's angel-form appeared;
She led me on, with placid pace,
To Jesus, as my Hiding-place.]*

6 Should storms of seven-fold thunder roll,
And shake the globe from pole to pole,
No flaming bolt could daunt my face,
For Jesus is my Hiding-place.

7 On him almighty vengeance fell,
That must have sunk a world to hell;
He bore it for a chosen race,
And thus became their Hiding-place.

8 A few more rolling suns, at most,
Will land me on fair Canaan's coast,
Where I shall sing the song of grace,
And see my glorious Hiding-place.

So good. It's vital, says Hebrews, that we think right thoughts about Jesus. But we must not stop with merely thinking, and this brings us to a second action point.

II. Hebrews helps us live in light of the supremacy of Jesus.

And this living in light of is supposed to happen in community, as the epistles make so clear. Hebrews makes this connection in two special ways. One, by use of the hortatory subjunctive (remember your grammar days?). The other, by use of the one another commands.

First, the hortatory subjunctive. What's that? It comes from the Latin verb, hortor, "to exhort." It's simply a first person plural verb in the present subjunctive. Just look for the words "let us", which appear eleven times in Hebrews. For instance...

Hebrews 4:1 "Therefore, while the promise of entering his rest still stands, let us fear lest any of you should seem to have failed to reach it."

Hebrews 4:14 "Since then we have a great high priest who has passed through the heavens, Jesus, the Son of God, let us hold fast our confession."

Hebrews 6:1 "Therefore let us leave the elementary doctrine of Christ and go on to maturity, not laying again a foundation of repentance from dead works and of faith toward God..."

Hebrews 13:13 "Therefore let us go to him outside the camp and bear the reproach he endured."

That last one sums it up. If we truly believe Jesus died on a cross outside the city, and that He died for us, then let us go to Him and bear the reproach. In other words, let us walk in His steps, to borrow a phrase from 1 Peter 2:21. It's good to say we believe in Him. Now it's time to show it.

Here's another way we show it, through the "one another" commandments. We have already seen these in 1 Peter ("love one another," "live in harmony with one another," "offer hospitality to one another," "clothe yourselves with humility toward one another," and "greet one another"). We learned that when we fulfill our one another responsibilities, we are actually putting the gospel on display, for the gospel both motivates us and enables us to fulfill these responsibilities.

We saw the same in Romans ("Be devoted to one another," "Honor one another," "live in harmony with one another," "stop passing judgment on one another," "pursue what edifies one another," "accept one another," "admonish one another," and "greet one another").

We saw it as well in Ephesians (“bear with one another,” remember “we are members of one another,” “be kind, compassionate, and forgiving to one another,” “speak to one another with God-honoring songs,” and “submit to one another”).⁴

And now we’re going to see it in Hebrews. In Hebrews we find three one another responsibilities (i.e. three gospel connections).

A. We’re called to encourage one another (3:13; 10:25). The writer actually gives this command twice, first in chapter 3, then in chapter 10. Let’s look at the first, in 3:12-13 (NIV), “See to it, brothers, that none of you has a sinful, unbelieving heart that turns away from the living God. But encourage one another daily [ESV ‘exhort one another every day’], as long as it is called Today, so that none of you may be hardened by sin’s deceitfulness.”

We see the problem at hand in verse 12. If a follower of Jesus develops a sinful heart, an unbelieving heart, he can turn away from the living God. That’s a very bad thing. And to prevent it, in His kindness, the Lord has given His church a backflow prevention device.

Do you know what that is? Every so often a backflow inspector comes to our church facility. Why? In layman’s terms, there are pipes in our church building that are intended to carry water one direction. The city doesn’t want contaminated water back-flowing into its good water supply. So the inspector comes. He’s here to verify that our backflow prevention device is working.

We actually have two backflow prevention devices in this church. One is downstairs in the basement. The other is right here in Hebrews 3. In His grace, the Lord has installed a spiritual backflow protection system in His church because He doesn’t want His Living Water backflowing, but moving in one direction, forward.

Just think. When sinners drink the Living Water, they begin to enjoy the refreshing power of Christ and leave their life of sin and begin a journey. They get baptized and enter the church. That’s a good thing. But this isn’t. When a sinner who’s tasted the Living Water enters the church, but then backflows and retreats into the world.

I have decided to follow Jesus, no turning back, no turning back, says the song. But when life gets hard, we’re tempted to do just that, to turn back.

So where is this spiritual backflow prevention system that God has installed? It’s not in the basement. It’s actually portable. Presently it’s right here in the auditorium. In a few moments it will move. You’re looking at it. It’s us, God’s people.

See to it, says the writer, that none of you turns away.

That’s our task in the negative. Don’t let a brother retreat. Here’s the positive. This is what will help our brother not retreat. Encourage/exhort one another.

The ministry of encouragement is a powerful force in the church, and here we learn three insights regarding it.

1. We’re to do it daily. And more specifically, do it today. “But encourage one another daily, as long as it is called Today.” Daily. Today. Why everyday? Because somebody in the Body needs it every day.

So if someone asks, “When are your church services?” The answer should be, “Well, our corporate services happen on Sundays, morning and evening, and Wednesday evenings, but we’re engaged in the one on one ministry of encouragement on Mondays, Tuesdays, and every other day of the week.”

⁴ Here are a couple of other epistles we haven’t seen. One is Galatians (“serve one another,” “do not bite and devour one another,” “do not provoke and envy one another,” and “bear one another’s burdens”). The other is James (“do not slander one another,” “do not grumble against one another,” “confess your sins to one another,” and “pray for one another”).

“Exhort one another,” says the ESV and AV. The Greek is parakaleo, literally “to call to or for.” It typically involves verbal activity. To encourage is to put courage into another by using constructive, hope-giving words, and appropriate actions.

You say, “What does it sound like?” Well, it sounds like what we hear when we read the epistle to the Hebrews. What the writer calls for in 3:13 he says he gives in this letter, which he calls “a word of encouragement/exhortation” in 13:22.

And why specifically are we to do it? What’s our aim? This text says...

2. We’re to do it to protect our brothers against becoming hardened.

“Encourage one another...so that none of you may be hardened by sin’s deceitfulness.” Sin is so deceptive, and when I’m all by myself, I am exponentially more vulnerable to its deceptive, hardening power.

So when we see a brother who’s losing his edge for spiritual things, what should we do? Just wait until he commits some really big sin, and then go after him? No. Encourage him. Perhaps exhort him. Look for ways to put into his mind the truth about the supremacy of Christ and the privilege of serving Him.

And there’s a specific kind of encouragement that the writer calls for in 10:25, “Let us not give up meeting together, as some are in the habit of doing, but let us encourage one another—and all the more as you see the Day approaching.”

So here’s a special focus of the encouragement that we should be giving.

3. We’re to do it to promote church involvement. Missing church is a habit. Did you catch that? “As some are in the habit of doing.” And to prevent this habit, the writer says we should encourage one another.

“Hey, Bob, missed you last week! Your smile always brightens my day when I see it in Sunday School. Hope to see you next Sunday.”

Just a little card like that, or a text, or a word in the grocery store on Thursday, goes a long way. Encourage one another, says Hebrews. And here’s an important incentive...

4. We’re to do it as we see the Day approaching. That’s what 10:25 says, “Encourage one another—and all the more as you see the Day approaching.” What day? The Day that we should live every day and do everything in light of, the Day Paul describes in 2 Thessalonians 1:10, “the day he comes to be glorified in his holy people and to be marveled at among all those who have believed.”

Jesus is coming again, beloved, and we will see Him face to face. Knowing that Day is coming is all the incentive we need to engage in the ministry of encouragement on this day.

We find our second “one another” text in the preceding verse. Notice Hebrews 10:24 (NIV), “And let us consider how we may spur one another on toward love and good deeds.” Let us consider, says the Spirit of God through this writer. The Greek verb is katanoeo, from the root word noos, “mind.” So this is a call to use our minds and think about something. And what is that?

B. We’re called to stir up one another (10:24). The NIV says, “Consider how we may spur one another on.” Literally, “consider one another to provoke.” The Greek word is paroxmos. We get our English word peroxide from it.

Do you know what that is? As a little boy, I hated it. It’s what my mother retrieved from the medicine cabinet when I fell and scraped my knee, the bottle of peroxide. And when she poured it right on the sore, what happened? It started bubbling and hissing at me, which it was doing, as I later found out, to fight off infection.

The same word appears in Acts 15:39 where we’re told that the “contention” was so strong between Paul and Barnabas that they parted company. But here in Hebrews we're told to provoke one another in a positive manner, "unto love and to good works" (AV).

Let's unpack that thought. What's it take to fulfill this task? Three things.

1. This requires being intentional. "Consider," says the writer. Be concerned about. Notice. Think about. And do this with one another. Again, literally, "consider one another to provoke." To do that I must get intentional about how my brothers and sisters in the church are doing. If I don't devote time to it, it won't happen.

Let me offer a practical suggestion. Use your church directory to pray for one another. Take a page a day, or two. When you come across the name of a person you haven't seen in a while, or someone with a special need that burdens you, then pray for them and think of how the Lord might want to use you to spur on that person.

2. This requires getting involved. Peroxide doesn't help when it's in the bottle. It needs to be poured on the wound. Once there's contact, then the healing begins. Likewise, we're to get involved. Specifically, we're "to spur one another on" (NIV), "to stimulate one another" (NASB), "to stir up one another" (ESV).

3. This requires not just doing, but motivating others to do. We're to spur one another on "toward love and good deeds." What does that mean? It means that, while it's good if you're exhibiting love and good deeds, by God's grace, it's not enough. If your brother isn't, then you have another assignment. Ask the Lord to use you to get your brother exhibiting love and good deeds.

Love. Making Christlike sacrifices for the good of others. And good deeds. Christlike actions that benefit others to the glory of God. That's your aim for your brother, to see love and good deeds flowing from his life.

So don't just play the game. Be a coach too. Look for ways to inspire your brother to get in the game and play it for the glory of God!

When I was about twelve, a Sunday School teacher challenged me to start reading my Bible every day and read through the New Testament. The Lord used her simple challenge to spur me on to a life changing practice.

I was eighteen when another life-changing conversation took place, this one with my pastor. I was heading off to college to major in medicine, and he said, "I think God wants you to be a pastor," he told me. I'd never thought of it before, and frankly, I resisted it initially. But the Lord used those timely words of encouragement to spur me on to love and good deeds.

And now that's my calling, and yours too, as it is for every Jesus-follower. Let's not just do the Christian life, but let's invest in others so that they do it with us. Let's do everything we can to get them thinking and functioning in light of Jesus' supremacy.

If a few moments, I'm going to give you an assignment to put this into practice. But first, there's one more "one another" text, and it brings it all together.

C. We're called to love each another as brothers (13:1). Notice 13:1, "Keep on loving each other as brothers." Technically, this isn't a "one another" reference, for the Greek term allelon isn't there. But the sense of it certainly is.

The text literally reads, "The brotherly love let it remain." The writer uses the Greek word philadelphia, from philos, which speaks of family affection and devotion.

My non-Christians friends, I'm so glad you're here, but I want to say something at this point that's directed to my Christian friends (which of course, by God's grace could include you today, if you too would repent and put your faith in Christ). My Christian friends, please let this sink in.

1. Since we have the same Father, we are brothers. I'll say it another way. Since God is my Father, and since God is your Father, then we are children of the same Father, and that makes us brothers. Forever.

The implications are huge, and in essence, it boils down to this.

2. In order to please our Father, we must show we value our brothers.

The ESV and AV say, “Let brotherly love continue.” The NASB, “Let love of the brethren continue.”

It’s not enough to say we’re brothers and sisters. We must show we’re brothers and sisters. And not just past tense, but in the present. Let brotherly love continue. Keep on loving each other as brothers.

The fact that the writer of Hebrews concludes his letter with that command indicates it doesn’t automatically happen. We’re prone to settle for past demonstrations of brotherly love and miss the present opportunities. So he says, keep on doing it, let it continue.

Gospel realities must produce gospel connections, and these are the ones emphasized in Hebrews. Encourage one another. Stir up one another. Love one another.

I want us to take this to heart by asking ourselves some very pointed questions. We’ve been talking about how to help a person who has grown weary in the walk of faith. We’ve learned from Hebrews that we need to get them thinking about the supremacy of Jesus, and then functioning in light of the supremacy of Jesus.

But this is still too general. So I want us to ponder three specific kinds of brothers in our spheres of influence—the discouraged brother, the sidelined brother, and the forgotten brother. And concerning each, a question.

Make It Personal: Three important questions to consider...

1. What discouraged brother does the Lord want me to encourage this week?

Ask Him. He’ll lay someone on your heart. It’s probably someone that you’re thinking of right now. Send some encouragement their way this week. Send a card. Share a Bible verse. Spend some extra time in prayer for them. Invite to your home. Watch their kids. Do something intentional to encourage them.

2. What sidelined brother does the Lord want me to stir up this week?

By sidelined, I mean someone who’s not in the game as they once were. And by stir up, I mean, not irritate, but motivate, stimulate to love and good deeds. This takes a little more tact. You don’t do it by walking up to the person and blurting out, “What’s your problem?! We need your efforts around here! Get back in the game!”

No, you minister to this kind, to borrow from Jesus in another context, “by prayer and fasting.” Get alone with the Lord and ask Him for insight as to how to help your sidelined brother. Ask Him to prepare their heart for the words and deeds you’re going to send their way. And ask Him to use you (and others) to restore that fallen brother, or wayward brother. And do it in the way you’d want it done with you if the tables were turned, which may well be the case down the road.

3. What brother have I loved in the past (i.e. a ‘forgotten’ brother) that the Lord wants me to love again this week? You see, this calling is so daily. We’re inclined to think, “That brother knows I love them. I’ve already made that clear.” Really? When? Let brotherly love continue, says Hebrews. So ask the Lord to put a forgotten brother on your heart this week, and let him know you’re glad he’s your brother.

That’s what it means to be a caring community. Let’s keep doing it, and all the more as we see the Day approaching!
